

"DID I CROSS THE BRIDGE? WELL, I GUESS YES!"

able to the Tammany officials and the organization for disposal through friendly channels.

The remainder is protected. Most of it must under existing laws be spent under civil service regulations. This includes the salaries of the thousands of city employees appointed under civil service laws.

Of the $40,000,000 a large proportion of course must be expended under competitive bidding. All contracts involving more than $1,000 outlay at one time must be advertised and awarded under competition.

Exempt city positions to which loyal Tammany men may be appointed by the officers elected yesterday are estimated roughly at 500. This number includes all the heads of departments and the various attaches not under civil service laws.

Nearly $2,000,000 can thus be expended directly by Tammany as rewards for its friends.

CROKER SAYS NOT A WORD.

Next to the question of patronage the inquiry most propounded among those who voted for Low was one concerning the future action of Richard Croker. The Associated Press sent a telegram to Wantage early to-day asking his opinion on the election of McClellan. The following reply was received:

Wantage, Nov. 4, 1903.

"I have nothing to say on the result of the election."—Richard Croker.

Flushed with victory and smiling to scores of friends, Col. George B. McClellan, accompanied by his wife, came from his apartments at the Murray Hill Hotel to-day and entered the dining room. Scores of men waited in the lobby to congratulate the Mayor-elect and, breakfast over, he joined them. For half an hour Col. McClellan talked, laughed and smoked.

MCCLELLAN WILL NOT REST.

"I need a vacation," he said to a reporter for The Evening World. "I won't take it, though. I expect to go to Washington on Friday or Saturday at the latest and take up the Cuban reciprocity question. Until that question is finished I will do nothing toward the naming of my Cabinet or other city officials. In fact, I will not think of that until my Washington duties are completed."

"I reiterate what I said all through the campaign, that the people of New York have no cause to regret my election. The men who will get the commissions will not be the sort to get criticism justly from any one and they will not be criticized. Nor will I be criticized adversely for making appointments."

"What about Commissioner Greene's threat to resign before Jan. 1?" was asked.

GOOD BY, GREENE.

"That is Commissioner Greene's business, not mine. I have said that I would not retain Commissioner Greene in office, and I shall not. He can resign whenever he chooses as far as I am concerned."

Regarding the thousands of congratulatory letters and telegrams he had received Col. McClellan said: "There are so many of them that I have been. One that pleased me greatly was from Senator Joseph B. Foraker. It read:

"If it must be a Democrat I am glad you are the one."

DEVEY DOWN AND OUT.

William A. Devey cut an insignificant figure in the contest. His entire vote in Greater New York was only 2,935.

The only point at which Tammany failed to gain was in the election of Assemblymen. The Republicans held their own there while Tammany scored an about face on the majority against it in the Board of Aldermen. Borough President Cromwell, of Richmond, is the only Fusion candidate to secure election.

The result shows that Greater New York is not only Democratic but Tammany.

The feature of the election which will attract attention all over the country is the utter elimination of the Kings County Democracy as an independent factor in New York City politics. The election of George B. McClellan means that the delegation that will go to the next Democratic National Convention from Greater New York will be all Tammany.

Hugh McLaughlin is down and out. The old war horse whose opinion has been sought by national leaders and whose influence has been potent in close contests in national conventions has been exposed as a man without influence in his own borough. The Tiger has crossed the bridge.

The delegates from Brooklyn to the next National Democratic Convention will be men who will vote with the men from the Tammany organization in Manhattan. If, indeed, Tammany has not by that time perfected an organization in all the boroughs of the city. The election of George B. McClellan means that when the delegates from New York City get off the train in the town where the convention is held the Tammany banner will wave over all and they will vote as a unit.

In the result of the election in Brooklyn may be read the plain wish of the Democrats of that borough to be on the side of the political combination in the greater city that controls the votes and the patronage. In national politics hereafter the Democracy of the city will be represented by Tammany Hall, and independent Democrats on either side of the river will have little chance to be heard.

NEW YORK HOLDS BALANCE.

The tremendous influence of New York City in national politics must be a consideration hereafter when national candidates are to be named. Tammany Hall, in the teeth of the only man who has ever had the nerve to stand out against it in the Democratic party, has succeeded in dominating a city that casts more votes for all candidates than any one State of twenty-six in the Union. There are but five States from the Atlantic to the Pacific from the Gulf of Mexico to the Canadian line, that register a greater total vote for candidates than the city of New York—this, of course, exclusive of New York State.

The way is open for Tammany Hall to control the State Convention of the Democratic party, with the assistance of Buffalo and perhaps a few county organizations opposed to the State machine. From all indications the power of the up-State politician, who has in times past controlled the Democracy of New York, with the assistance of Hugh McLaughlin, has passed. In this respect the election of yesterday was momentous to every community in the State, because it foreshadows the placing of the balance of power of the Democracy of New York in New York City, and the manipulation of the balance in the hands of the leader of Tammany Hall.

That Patrick Henry McCarren knew his Brooklyn better than did Hugh McLaughlin was shown when the ballots were counted last night; that Charles F. Murphy knew what he was doing when he chose McCarren as the man to swing Brooklyn for the Tammany ticket is also in evidence. In the victory of McClellan and the Democratic ticket, the fact must not be overlooked that Kings County no longer figures as an independent factor in State or national politics.

The Tiger has crossed the bridge.

McLAUGHLIN HAS NOTHING TO REGRET.

Hugh McLaughlin, of Brooklyn, said this afternoon that if he had to go through a campaign of conditions similar to this latest one that he would not regret it.

"Far from having any regret," were his words, "for the stand I took in the campaign just ended, I feel bound to declare that I would repeat it if the case had to be gone over again. I will certainly act consistently with my recent policy should the occasion ever repeat itself."

ENGLAND REGRETS IT.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Such comments as the afternoon newspapers make on the result of the election yesterday in New York express regret at Tammany's victory.

The Pall Mall Gazette says it gives the world a lesson that "purity is not inherent in a democratic form of government."

The St. James's Gazette bitterly assails Tammany, saying the result is "one which every honest person must deeply lament, and proves how powerless is true opinion to make its weight felt under a representative system when it is confronted by the machinery of an unscrupulous organization."
